Levelline Framing, Inc. Participates in Coyotes Charity Golf Event

Scottsdale, Arizona, October 27, 2008 -- Levelline's Eric Gallagher joined Phoenix Coyotes players, coaches and staff at the Legend Trail Golf Club in Scottsdale for a charity event to raise money for various children's foundations.

Coyotes Charities, a non-profit organization of the NHL franchise, raised approximately $50,000 through the golf tourney, silent auction and donations. Gallagher played with the winning fivesome that included Brian McGrattan, a Coyotes player popularly known as, "The Enforcer." The team scored 16 under 56, the best on the day.

Quoted in The Desert Dog Blog by Dave Vest, Gallagher described McGrattan as, "A stand-up guy." He went on to say that, "Lots of times, pro athletes play in these events and they hardly speak to you. With [McGrattan], it felt like he was just one of our buddies." That sentiment was echoed by Josh Evans, another member of the winning team, who described McGrattan's antics as, "Hilarious," including using an aluminum can as a tee on a long par 3. Other Coyotes players were also described as personable and engaging during the tournament.

Levelline Framing, Inc.'s management and staff are proud to participate with organizations of this caliber to raise awareness and funds for children's causes throughout Arizona.
